The orders recently issued by the Court are perplexing. The undersigned has joined the letter of Yoil Weingarten timely, yet the court denied relief, claiming that the undersigned gave no reason for the relief sought. On the other hand, Yakev Weingarten joined the letter much later and gave no new reasons for the relief requested, yet the Court granted him some relief (although explicitly not the relief requested).

If discussed on the merits, in regards to the ~~access~~ access to means for defense preparation, we are in the same position. and in regards to discovery, the undersigned received the discovery laptop much later than Yakev. No reason exists why to single out and treat the undersigned differently.

Finally, it is hard to understand why the Court ~~repea~~ repeatedly construes the defendants' motions as requests for time extensions all while the defendants clarify again and again that the relief requested is simply that the Court enforce its own orders.

Sincerely,

Shmuel Weingarten
